It’s not what we do, it’s that we do SOMETHING...
3 approaches to doing green dots

DIRECT
Address the situation head-on by talking to any of the people involved. Just asking if everything is OK often helps to mitigate most problematic situations.

EXAMPLES OF THINGS TO SAY:
“do you need some help?” “what’s happening here?” “that’s not cool.” “what’s your deal?” “that’s not okay with me.”

DELEGATE
If you feel uncomfortable saying something yourself or you feel like someone else is better suited to handle it (a friend, Security, bartender), delegate is a rock-solid option.

EXAMPLES OF THINGS TO SAY
“Can you check in with that situation over there?” “Will you find out if your friend is okay?” “Does that look okay with you? Can you step in there?”

DISTRACT
This is about diversion. It can be very non-confrontational or you could walk right up to the situation to do something. The idea is to get a person out of the situation so you can check in.

EXAMPLES OF THINGS TO SAY/DO:
“Hey, your car’s getting towed! You need to get out there now.” Spill your drink, drop some papers, or make some other low key “scene.” “Come over here, your friend is looking for you.”
